

JUST GOSSIP ABOUT PEOPLE

Sale to Further Benefit Abington Memorial Hospital—Nancy Wynn Chats About Various People and Things

DID you go to the movies this week and see the pictures of Vanity Fair, the Horse Show and the Devonshire tea at the home of the Alba Johnsons, in Rosemont? Really they are splendid.

I had arrived at Vanity Fair after the rain started at 6 o'clock, and so, lovely though it was, I did not realize how perfectly ideal the layout of that fete had been until I saw it at the movies.

Well, I told you a few days ago that some few things were left over from the fete on account of the rain, and so Mrs. George Lorimer, who was chairman; Mrs. George Elkins, Jr.; Mrs. Jack Gilbert; Mrs. Barclay Warburton; Mrs. Robert Sewell and Mrs. Laurence Butler will hold a sale of these articles tomorrow afternoon from 2 until 6 o'clock on the lawn in front of the Abington Hospital, for which the fete was given.

The hospital grounds, which are situated on the Old York road, are ideally suited for the purpose and many of the most attractive of the articles exhibited last week will be sold at greatly reduced prices.

The committee does not believe in keeping things from year to year, and so everything will be disposed of. Some of the valuable donations will be auctioned off and the articles that were put up on shares will be drawn. It will be quite a delightful little addition to the big affair of June 5, at which they realized more than $7000. I think you'll agree with me that it was one of the most successful affairs held this year.

I HEAR that Billie Wright has been transferred to a battleship now and has received his commission as ensign. Eleanor, who has gone with him to every port he has been sent so far—that is, Newport and Annapolis—has gone to a southern port, where she will be near whenever he comes to land. These two young people have been better off than many others who have been married since the war, for Billie, you see, chose the navy and he had to study here and have the practical work on shore first, and so his wife could be with him a great part of the time. Hard though it must be for them to be parted, they have been much longer together than many of the other young brides and grooms of the war. The William Cox Wrights, Billie's father and mother, will spend the summer in Narragansett Pier.

ALIX DOLAN has been studying at the Bryn Mawr Hospital for several months, you know, but now, I hear, she has been transferred to the Presbyterian Hospital, as the special nursing course she has undertaken is being taught there. The Clarence Dolans will leave for their Newport villa shortly after Independence Day and Alix will spend a short time with them, but most of her summer will be devoted to hard work right here in town.

WELL, were you surprised to hear about Ned Duer's marriage to Betty Atwood? Everybody else was, including most of his best friends. Nobody knew he was even engaged, and the announcement came as a great shock to everybody. Ned is a second lieutenant now, you know, and evidently received orders of a decided character last week and hastened the wedding on that account. Betty Atwood is the daughter of the Rt. Rev. J. W. Atwood, D. D., Bishop of Arizona, and everybody who knows her says that she is a "perfect peach." She has been a member of Mrs. Duer's Beaver Camp every summer for a number of years and last year was a counselor. All the girls are crazy about her, and I think we are pretty lucky to get such an attractive girl as a fellow citizen.

DID you ever have your character read by your handwriting? It's fascinating. Every funny-looking idiosyncrasy your writing has shows some quirk in your character. I should think people who understand the science of it would always use a typewriter. Why tell the world whether they are selfish or terribly impulsive or just a bit conceited? But I think it would take a pretty clever person to find out anything about two soldiers who wrote home the other day from their writing. They don't know each other and they are separated by many miles and two or three branches of the service, but they happened to write to the same person. One letter was addressed in a large, bold handwriting, with heavy, firm strokes. You could just sort of see the husky infantryman who put down his gun to take up the pen. The other was written in small letters, rather uneven and occupying about as much space as the stamp for the whole address. And the man who wrote the first letter is called "Shorty" by his frank and facetious intimates and would reach about to the watch chain of the other, who is more than six feet and has a hand that is easily as big as both of mine. You never can tell. NANCY WYNN.

WOMEN'S LAND ARMY ROUSES FARM SISTERS

Chairman of State Body Tells How War Is Dispelling Mental Lethargy

Mrs. Frank Black, chairman of the Pennsylvania Society of Farm Women, has written a letter to women who are being enrolled as chairmen of the various sub-organizations in Pennsylvania farm districts.

For a long time the question of the farms and the lives of farm women has been one of the greatest importance to Mrs. Black. She has herself lived among them for eighteen years and knows them.

She has been pushing the work of the Society of Farm Women with greatly increased zeal since America entered the war and her letter, sent out to encourage the organizing of groups among them, says in part:

"This is a war of agriculture and its ultimate victory depends on the farmers. Farm women are the strength of the farms; under present conditions, were it not for the women, many farms could not exist a day.

Perhaps the most interesting thing to watch in the history of the women's land army will be the effects of the contact between the city women and these strange, silent women of the farms. A short time ago the farmer folk knew nothing about the war. It made not the slightest mark upon their serenity.

But now the farmers, men and women, are awakening and the great importance is to keep them awake, and to get the greatest gain out of their labor. It is necessary to keep their minds stimulated. Pleasure, interest in each other and in the work of the outside world; a realization that the nation regards their task as a most important and honorable one. All this is a first step and the great step.

The final step must be the recognition of the farmers—men and women—as the most important factor in the growth and welfare of the nation and the development of them intellectually through the channels of society, hitherto closed and just now opening to them.

CUTINES FOR FAMILIES OF MEN SERVING FLAG

Children's Country Week Association to Give Patriotic Touch to Charity Work

The Children's Country Week Association this year plans to specialize in taking the wives and children of enlisted men out to the different country places which have been lent to the association, and to the seashore.

Already a few of the mothers have gone out, and a preliminary picnic was given last Saturday, but the really big drive for the country begins in about two weeks.

The work of the association gains an added significance this year, which has been especially marked out as the children's year of the war, and the importance of the short trip to the country for both mothers and children is great.

Sent out to houses where they are treated as guests, with good food, comfortable and attractive rooms and the freedom of a fresh, beautiful country, the children of the city, used only to the sight of dirt and heat and barren ugliness of existence, not only gain new health and strength, but learn of a new world entirely. And the effect of that glimpse is not merely a transitory one.

They learn of strange things, such as wearing uniforms when they go to bed, regarding the custom as a quaint and pleasant idiosyncrasy; they see a tablecloth on the table and fresh flowers in a vase, and no woman or girl child can ever shed the vague influence of such inconsequential yet delightful details.

A problem has offered itself this year in the scarcity of young men, and the question of finding a "counselor" for the horde of small masculine imps is being debated. The "counselor" for the boys must be a young man who can play baseball, dive in every conceivable position, make whistles and win the affectionate obedience of a tribe of tiny barbarians. He must also be able to look a small offender in the eye and convince him of the utter absurdity of smoking cigarettes when the cigarette is nearly as long as the smoker.

It is only the very young children up to twelve years who will be accepted this summer, precedence being given, as has been said, to the children of enlisted men. All children over the maximum age will be hard at work in the fields.

ENTERTAINMENTS AID U. S. "ANIMAL ARMY"

Red Star Auxiliary Holding Sale to Benefit Dogs and Horses in Fighting Zone

To further humane work among the animals of the army, the Woman's Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals is giving a series of entertainments at Kensington avenue and Huntingdon street. They have just about everything to sell at this benefit affair, and so they are calling it a rummage sale. It will continue tomorrow and Saturday.

Mrs. Daniel Neill McQuellin, chairman of the Red Star auxiliary, and Mrs. Augustus Bruner, chairman of the sale committee, are assisted by a number of women who are interested in humane work among the animals close to the firing line; and they are vital adjuncts to the fighting force of the United States army.

The Red Star is the Red Cross among animals. Before its work was fully established many valuable dogs and horses that had worked heroically on the battlefields of France were allowed to suffer and die from inattention. An awakening to the need for preventive rescue work resulted in a number of successful benefit entertainments being given here in the last half year. One of the most interesting of last winter was the dog show at the Bellevue-Stratford, when a large sum was raised. Another profitable entertainment was given at the Belmont Driving Club. From the sale of a horse last week $1600 was raised, and other smaller benefits have aided in piling up the money for humane work among sick dogs and horses.

The Woman's Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals hopes to clear between $500 and $1000 as the result of the rummage sale. The fund will go toward purchasing ambulances, surgical supplies, the payment of veterinary surgeons and such other work as will relieve suffering and prolong lives among the animals at the front.
